FROM OUR RECTOR

Dear Parishioners,

In addition to the inner circle of the Twelve, we are told today that He appointed another 72 (12×6) and sent them two by two to the places He himself would be visiting. That is a good description of our Christian role. We are supposed to go first to prepare the ground but then it is Jesus who comes to plant the seed of faith. Jesus then goes on to give an instruction to his disciples. Below are a few principles Jesus presents today.

He first points out that the harvest is great and there are very few laborers, few who are willing to do the harvesting work with Jesus. The challenge was being thrown out to all His followers to find more people to join in the harvesting work. We have to be careful as we listen to these words not to exclude ourselves because we are middle-aged or married or already have a career. The words are addressed to all of us and call for some kind of response from every one of us. It is never too late to respond to the call.

The disciple is called on to travel light. Jesus himself “had nowhere to lay his head” and he only had the clothes he wore. So many of us are weighed down by the things we own. Some of us have to protect our property with the latest in security devices. In our search for prosperity and material security we have lost the more precious gift of freedom. They are not to stop to greet people in the sense of carrying on lengthy conversations. Their mission was urgent – there are few laborers for a potentially huge harvest.

They are to be bearers of peace. Peace, shalom, is much more than an absence of violence. It is a deep inner harmony with oneself, with others, with one’s environment, with God. “Blessed are the peacemakers for they shall be called the children of God.” We could hardly bring a more precious gift to others than this inner peace. It is, in fact, the heart of our Christian message. Faith, hope and love are the keys to peace.

We need to make the underlying principles and values that Jesus presents in the Gospel ours too. It will require some reflection on our part both as individuals and as communities on how we should effectively share the Gospel with those around us and be the harvesters that are so badly needed.

This coming week as a nation we will celebrate Independence Day on July 4th. Just a quick reminder that there will be only one Mass that day at 8:00 am. In the Declaration of Independence, we find these words: “We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal, that they are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable Rights, that among these are Life, Liberty, and the pursuit of Happiness.” Throughout the course of human events, we have experienced men and women who have given their lives to defend and preserve what we hold most dear. Let us not fail in being grateful to the thousands and thousands of men and women who have served us in our Armed Forces.

ROZANSKISERVE THE LORD
WITH GLADNESS

Our country has, and will always have, work to do to live up to its promise

In readings this week from Hosea, we see a similar balance of promise and flaws in Israel

Dear brothers and sisters in Christ,

We celebrate Independence Day this week! It's a good time to think about the promise — and the challenges — of our country.

Providentially, we're reading from the prophet Hosea this week. He spoke to Israel about the promise of their identity as a nation, as well as their characteristic flaws.

Hosea is one of the key figures who describes the relationship between God and Israel in terms of a marriage. That's the promise of Israel's identity: They — as a nation, not just as individuals — were specially chosen by God. God intends to give the world a gift through them.

The problem is: They have a hard time living up to the promise of their identity.

Ancient Israel had a tendency to assume that, because they were chosen, they were “golden” — nothing could ever go wrong. But God expected them to live in gratitude for their gifts rather than in presumption and was willing to let them learn some hard lessons about the responsibility that came with being the chosen people.

Ancient Israel also had a tendency to “go through the motions” when it came to their religious duties — which, in their case, meant sacrifice. The sacrificial system of ancient Israel was meant to be an outward sign of an inward reality — it was a precursor to the sacramental system in this way. But the sacrificial system also had a tendency to fall into an empty outward show. Hosea and the prophets critiqued this empty show — as did Jesus — calling Israel to restore the connection between the outer and inner dimensions of sacrifice.

That same pattern of “promise and flaw” shows up in individual human personalities. Here in the Archdiocese of St. Louis we're especially aware of how the pattern shows up in high schools. If you travel around the Catholic world a little bit, you'll see that religious orders have these patterns of “promise and flaw” as well.

I think, then, as we celebrate Independence Day, it's fair to ask: How would we describe the promise and flaws of the United States as a country?

Freedom and independence are surely a key part of the promise of our nation. “Who my parents were does not determine who I am or can become” — that's a key aspiration of human beings. The United States is built on that aspiration. Like ancient Israel we live up to that promise very imperfectly! But it remains our founding promise, and a gift to the world. We're called — not just as individuals but as a nation — to live up to that promise.

A characteristic flaw of our country, however, is rooted in that same ideal. When it comes to freedom we have a tendency to think that “whatever I want is good.” When it comes to independence we have a tendency to think that “everyone else should arrange their lives around my self-determination.” In short, our weakness is a tendency to get locked into an adolescent assessment of our desires – not thinking through long-term consequences — and an egocentric approach to the world. We see those characteristic flaws very abundantly these days. We’ve basically set them up as cultural norms!

That doesn’t mean the end times are upon us. It means, like ancient Israel, we have — and will always have — work to do to live up to our promise.

So this week I think we can sing, with grateful hearts for the promise of America, and hearts that know its challenges:

America, America, God mend thine every flaw. Confirm thy soul in self-control, thy liberty in law.

Please consider a gift to the Annual Catholic Appeal.

Your generosity will immerse our communities in God’s unconditional love, which fills all of our hearts and unites us as one family, Brothers and Sisters All.

Mission Appeal

This Sunday, at all Masses Father Anthony Bautista of the Religious Institute of the Alagad ni Maria (Disciples of Mary) will be sharing his missionary experience. His mission apostolate is to the young people in the Philippines who are confronted with serious challenges of addiction, materialism, violence, and abuse.

We are invited to take part in the worldwide mission of our Church through our prayers and donations, and to receive the full graces of the Eucharist offered for us by this missionary priest. Catholics have traditionally extended their love and generosity to the missions of the world through the Propagation of Faith Appeal, which we will be responding this week.

Please be generous in responding to our Lord's call to each one of us to take part in His mission to all people.

Weekly Thoughts on Giving

"He said to them, 'The harvest is abundant, but the laborers are few...'" LUKE 10:2

As Catholics we are all called to serve. Each of us has been given "charisms" otherwise known as gifts from the Holy Spirit to help build God's Church. Our charisms can only be used for good. We know that we are using them in the right ministry when we are filled with joy and we want to share stories about our charitable works. Discern how God is calling you to use your charisms. Say "yes" to what God is calling you to do and then do it! Share your joy and invite others to do the same.
