FROM OUR RECTOR

Dear Parishioners,

This week we welcome Deacon Logan Hepp, who is a student at Kenrick-Glennon Seminary and from the Archdiocese of Omaha. Deacon Logan will be serving at the Cathedral Basilica Parish on weekends for the academic year. Join me this weekend in welcoming our new transitional deacon to the parish. Here is a little about Deacon Hepp.

I was born in Omaha on an unseasonably cool August morning on the feast day of St. John Vianney. Eighteen days later, on the Feast of the Coronation of Mary, I was baptized. My family lived in Kansas City, Missouri, for seven years before we headed back to God's Country: Nebraska. I have been a parishioner of St. Stephen the Martyr since 2002. I graduated from Millard West High School and earned a bachelor's degree in Physics from the University of Nebraska-Lincoln.

When I was 11, my brother helped me give my life to Jesus Christ. By the time I got to high school, though, I was living for myself. While in college in Lincoln, I got involved with the Fellowship of Catholic University Students (FOCUS). I was struggling with my faith, as many young Catholics do, but the students at the Newman Center and the FOCUS missionaries were instrumental in keeping me in the Church. I attended FOCUS's SEEK2013 conference and had a radical encounter with our risen Lord Jesus, and I ratified my 11-year-old self's "Yes." My life turned 180 degrees, and I have not looked back.

My discernment of the priesthood has been an interesting journey. When I was very little, I wanted to be a hobo who rode the trains and preached the Gospel. That "dream" was relegated to the back burner, though. When I was older, I remember seeing one of the associate pastors at my parish, and I thought, "Maybe I could be like him," but nothing more came of the thought. When I started serving at my parish, a deacon called me "Father Logan" when he saw me. I did not like that, though, because I wanted to get married and have kids. After the conference in college, my mind and heart turned toward the priesthood again. Still, that prospect scared me, and I let myself get distracted. While working as a FOCUS missionary in southwest Kentucky in 2014-15, I let my guard down enough to hear the Lord's gentle, emphatic invitation to enter the seminary. The idea of pursuing a vocation to the priesthood was exciting and mildly terrifying, but as I have continued to dive into this mystery with God for the past seven years, I am so consoled and excited for the future. I have no doubt that the Lord's plans for me are GOOD!

ARCHBISHOP'S COLUMN

We Can Let Gospel Considerations Shape Our Political Conversations

The blueprint reversals, featured in the readings this week, has to be a feature in the life of disciples

Dear brothers and sisters in Christ,

We celebrate the feast of the Triumph of the Cross this week on Sept. 14. The very title of the day emphasizes the greatest reversal in salvation history!

We're also reading from the Gospel of Luke, and we just happen to read the "Sermon on the Plain" this week from Luke 6. In the Sermon on the Plain, St. Luke gives us Jesus' blueprint of reversal for the world. Blessed are the poor, the hungry, the weeping and those persecuted for the Gospel; they will be exalted, each in a way that corresponds perfectly to their lowliness. Woe to the rich, those filled, the laughing and those whom the world commends; they will be brought low, each in a way perfectly suited to their worldly exaltation.

It's important to recognize this reversal as a feature of Jesus' teaching and life. It's important to realize that this reversal has to be a feature of the life of every disciple. And it's helpful to know that one of the great characteristics of the Gospel of Luke is how it spells out the blueprint of reversal over and over.

I want to suggest that it might be helpful to bring this blueprint of reversal to our political considerations this fall. We might ask every candidate: "How will you care for the vulnerable?" When candidates vocally support abortion, we can ask: "How does that care for the vulnerable?" When candidates vocally oppose immigration, we can ask: "How does that care for the vulnerable?" Of course these are just two issues among many. Still, they're prominent issues. And they provide good examples of how we can let Gospel considerations shape our political conversations on all issues and candidates.

ARCHBISHOP MITCHELL ROZANSKI

SERVE THE LORD
WITH GLADNESS

There are two other themes in the Gospel of Luke we encounter this week that are important in themselves and that can help shape our approach to political conversations this fall.

The first is prayer. At every pivotal moment in the Gospel of Luke, Jesus steps away for a time of prayer before He acts. This week we hear how He spent the night in prayer before choosing His apostles. What does that have to do with political conversations? We'll be voting on a constitutional amendment on abortion this November — a direct attack on vulnerable mothers and children. Learning from the Gospel of Luke, let's turn to prayer and trust in the power of prayer as we face this pivotal moment in our state.

The second is this simple but profound comment of Luke regarding Jesus: "Everyone in the crowd sought to touch Him because power came forth from Him and healed them all." As St. Leo the Great said, "what was visible in our Savior has passed over into His mysteries." St. Leo's point applies first and foremost to the sacraments: In them, power continues to come forth from the body of Christ. But it also applies to what happens when the Church works together: Power continues to come forth from the Mystical Body of Christ, not only for the healing of individuals, but also for the healing of cultures.

Let's bank on that as we pray, work and vote for political leaders and a society that more accurately mirrors the great blueprint of reversal that we see in Jesus and the Gospel of Luke.

Cathedral Basilica of St. Louis

RCIA

Have you ever thought about becoming a Catholic?

Do you know someone who might be interested in becoming Catholic?

Are you interested in finding out more about the Catholic Church?

Is your spouse, fiancé, neighbor, or friend interested?

The Rite of Christian Initiation of Adults (or RCIA) enables those who are interested in the Catholic faith to “find out what it is all about”. Most often, people come because they are invited.

Be the voice of Christ and offer the first invitation to someone you know who might be interested in the Catholic faith!

RCIA is for persons who have never been baptized, were baptized in another Christian tradition, or were baptized Catholic but have never celebrated Confirmation or received First Communion. It is also open to anyone who is interested in learning more about what Catholics believe and why we believe it. You are invited if you've been Catholic all your life, if you have a passing interest in the Catholic faith, or if you are anywhere in between!

The 2024-25 RCIA session will begin September 8.

To register or for additional information, please contact
Fr. Zac Povis at 314.373.8204 or zacharypovis@archstl.org

Weekly Thoughts on Giving

"Did not God choose those who are poor in the world to be rich in faith and heirs of the kingdom that he promised to those who love him?" JAMES 2:5

What is more important – being rich in faith or rich in possessions? Society tells us that possessions are most important. God teaches a different lesson. When we are rich in faith, we keep God first and experience true joy and peace. When we put possessions first, we soon realize we can never have enough and happiness is fleeting. When we put faith over possessions, we truly realize it is better to give than receive.
