FROM OUR RECTOR

Dear Parishioners,

In the Gospel proclaimed this Sunday, we are brought back into the setting of the Last Supper. Jesus is gathered with His disciples, and in that intimate moment He gives them the commandment of love—a command that is both tender and demanding, gentle yet strong, and very different from the spirit of the world.

He does not simply speak about love; He demonstrates it. That same evening, He kneels to wash the feet of His disciples, even the feet of Judas, who is about to betray Him. In this simple but profound act, Jesus shows that love must be lived. It requires more than words—it calls for concrete, self-giving action.

As the evening unfolds, Jesus begins to speak about His departure. “I will be with you only a little longer,” He says. It is no surprise that the disciples are troubled. They had left everything to follow Him—their homes, their work, their families—and now He speaks of going away. Sensing their anxiety, Jesus reassures them: “Do not let your hearts be troubled. Believe in God; believe also in me.” He reminds them that faith in Him is inseparable from faith in the One who sent Him. To place one’s trust in Jesus is to place one’s trust in the Father.

At this moment of farewell, Jesus speaks more deeply about His relationship with the Father and about the destiny that awaits His disciples. He tells them, “I am going to prepare a place for you... and I will come again and take you to myself, so that where I am, you also may be.” He speaks not of a physical place, but of the Father’s house—the fullness of life with God, where we will see Him face to face.

Yet the disciples struggle to understand. Thomas voices what many are thinking: “We do not know where you are going; how can we know the way?” Jesus answers with words that stand at the very heart of the Gospel: “I am the way, and the truth, and the life. No one comes to the Father except through me.” The path to God is not a set of directions or ideas—it is a person. It is Jesus Himself.

This is the heart of our faith. If we want to know what God is like, we look to Jesus. In His words and actions, we come to understand the mind and heart of God. In Him we see a God who draws near to His people, who heals, who forgives, who walks alongside us, not to condemn but to restore.

ARCHBISHOP'S COLUMN

Jesus changes the way He is present to the world with the Ascension

St. Paul is an example for us of rolling with the changes and moving to the next task in faith

Dear brothers and sisters in Christ,

The readings this week begin to look toward the Ascension. As they do so, they prepare us for change in various ways.

For example, in Jesus' farewell discourse from the Gospel of John, He says things like: "I am going away and I will come back to you. If you loved me, you would rejoice that I am going to the Father." He says things like: "The Advocate, the Holy Spirit, whom the Father will send in my name — He will teach you everything and remind you of all that I told you." Jesus was preparing the apostles for changes!

Change is also a theme in our readings from the Acts of the Apostles. St. Paul is ending his first missionary journey — and maybe looking forward to some rest? — but immediately a problem arises regarding whether Gentiles need to be circumcised to be Christians. That question is resolved when the Church realizes that God has brought about a change: external circumcision has been replaced by the indwelling of the Holy Spirit. Then, immediately — where we might need to rest and recover — St. Paul sets off on his second missionary journey and with new companions. St. Paul is a great example of rolling with the changes and moving to the next task.

For us, though, the changes that most deeply challenge us are often internal more than external. That is to say, we go through external changes — from grade school to high school, from high school to college, from college to work, from one job or house or city to another, and so on. But often, we don't know how to mature in our relationship with God. And so, while our external life changes, our faith life stagnates — because we're not prepared for the internal changes that growth in faith requires.

That's why reflecting on how Jesus prepared the apostles for the Ascension can help us. What was going to change for them was not whether He was present but how He was present. Jesus was preparing the apostles for a change from an external kind of presence (a person living alongside them) to an internal kind of presence (a person living within them). He wants to do the same with us!

For example: At some point in our prayer life we change from having someone else make time for us to pray to having to make our own time to pray. At some point in our moral life we change from needing someone else tell us what's right or wrong to knowing in our own conscience that some things are right or wrong. At some point in our life of faith we change from being told how other people have experienced Jesus in their lives to being the one telling how we have experienced Jesus in our lives.

When Christ ascends, He changes how He is present to the world. He walks us through the same kind of change in our own spiritual life over and over. That's why St. Paul says: "If, then, you were raised with Christ, seek what is above, where Christ is seated at the right hand of God." (Colossians 3:1)

What changes have you gone through? What changes is Jesus asking you to go through now to be more deeply present to Him in your life?
